Gettysburg Motor Club Achieves High Rank; New Service Offered

Gain In Membership Is Shown At Annual Meeting, Tuesday Evening.

The Gettysburg motor club of Adams county closed its sixth fiscal year as one of that select class of motor clubs of the country which during the year 1932 showed an increase in memberships.

The annual report, made to the annual membership meeting in Hotel Gettysburg auditorium Tuesday evening, showed the club has a higher membership than during the past two years. During the past month a membership expansion campaign in all sections of the county netted 100 new members to the club and brought the total membership to slightly over 400.

S. Edward Gable, president of the Pennsylvania motor federation, which is the state AAA unit with which the local club is affiliated, congratulated the club upon its success and upon the program of varied activity carried out during the year.

More than 150 members attended the annual meeting and voiced their commendation of the club's success and attainments of the year in an enthusiastic demonstration after the annual report was submitted.

F. E. Ballantyne Speaks

Frank E. Ballantyne, general manager of the Automobile club of Philadelphia AAA, and one of the most prominent motor club executives in the country, was the main speaker of the evening. He described the history and functions of AAA clubs, and related several instances where members of the Gettysburg club were assisted in troubles occurring in the state of Maine and in Philadelphia, during his identification with AAA clubs in those territories.

"You cannot feel anything else than proud of the achievements of your own club during the year. The report of the year's activity shows that your club is interesting itself in all phases of motor club work and is of equal rank with larger clubs.

"Unquestionably, you have attained success and you are on the road to even greater heights. Any club that can show the record the Gettysburg club has achieved under present conditions has more than demonstrated its value. You belong with a select group of clubs by reason of your high attainments of the year and I congratulate you."

Henry M. Scharf, president of the Gettysburg club, in his annual report described the activities followed during the year. He said in part:—

"Ninety-nine emergency road service calls were answered during the year by the 17 official club garages in the county. The average cost per call was $2.40 for a total of $236.40.

Road Service

"Four calls were for battery trouble; 3 members had carburetor trouble; 2 motors were frozen; in four cases gas lines were clogged; 10 had ignition trouble; two had difficulties with starters; five were stuck in the mud; in 8 cases tires were changed for women and 12 cases are classified as miscellaneous. All of these troubles affected members stalled along the roadside. In 49 other cases road repairs could not be made and the cars had to be towed to the nearest AAA garage.

"Travel information was provided for hundreds of visiting AAA member totaling thousands of miles of routings. But over 50 local members received routings in the club office and more than 30 were served by telephone.

"The best evidence that these services are necessary and essential is in the fact that based on our average membership for the year one out of every three members had occasion to require emergency road service and one out of every four of our members had need for our complete travel information service. These requirements were all fulfilled without cost as they are part of the membership service.

$1,620 Insurance

"Insurance paid during the year totaled $1,620 in the settlement of five cases. Two were death cases in which payments of $750 were made. The other three were in weekly indemnities for the period of injury and were in respective amounts of $75, $25 and $20.

"The legal services provided included securing of withdrawal of charges against one of our own members and two members of affiliated A.A.A. clubs. There were seven cases in which members of other A.A.A. clubs were charged with motor code violations in which the Gettysburg club refused to in-

$5,000 Bail Service Available Now With All Club Mem- berships.

Members of the Gettysburg motor club were made recipients of another free service with their membership in the local club by the announcement at the annual meeting of the club, Tuesday evening, by President Henry M. Scharf, that he had concluded arrangements whereby bail bond to the amount of $5,000, applicable in automobile cases, will be included with all memberships.

This bond is usable in all automobile cases with the exception of illegal transportation of liquor. It includes all serious charges, such as assault and battery by automobile, manslaughter and such other charges that require high bail, including driving while intoxicated.

"We consider this one of the finest services motor club membership offers," stated the local club president in making the announcement.

Available Anywhere

"This bond is carried with a national surety concern and our members will be covered in all parts of the country. They will have this protection constantly. Bail can be arranged at any A. A. A. office. If such an office is not available at the time, representatives of the surety company, with whom the bail is carried, will arrange for the bail and if neither is available the local club will accept collect telephone calls to arrange the same.

"Any motorist is liable, through no fault of his own, to be held on serious technical charges in localities where he might experience delay in raising large bail. This service eliminates all such delays and the possibility of his incarceration in the process. It will prove a most valued service when needed."

The local motor club head expressed the club's indebtedness to the A. A. A. clubs at Waynesboro and Chambersburg for making this service possible. It was arranged by the three clubs in unison and particular appreciation is due the Chambersburg club, it was stated.

MAIL CARRIERS DELIVER 4,171 PIECES DAILY

Each Of Four Gettys- burg Carriers Walks 11 Miles Every Day.

861 PIECES OF PARCEL POST

Gettysburg's four mail carriers each deliver an average of 4,171 pieces of mail a day, according to the last semi-annual inspection of routes by George P. Black, assistant postmaster here.

The mail delivered averages 118 pounds per carrier, the report shows. Each of the four carriers delivers on an average 3,005 pieces of first-class mail, postcards and letter-size circulars and 1166 pieces of other mail, including newspapers, magazines and larger circulars.

Each of the four carriers covers five and a half miles on each of his two trips, a total of 11 miles a day. This distance, however, does not include the distance walked by the carrier from one side of the street to the other.

In Gettysburg there are 1485 residences and 230 business places, a total of 1715 possible stops.

The four carriers here are Norton C. Miller, F. Mark Bream, Henry Garlach and Walter Johns.

In the semi-annual inspection of the four routes and the parcel post service, Mr. Black accompanies each carrier for one day.

During the inspection period, Luther McDonnell, the parcel post deliveryman, distributed a total of 861 parcels, having an aggregate weight of 6,597 pounds.

There are 43 letter and package boxes in Gettysburg. The local office also maintains 14 relay stations where the carriers pick up mail, in excess of the 50 pound limit assigned them, during their trips. Mail is taken to the relay stations by the postoffice truck.

The penalties of the past week included 42 for intoxication while driving and nine for transporting liquor, 34 for improper passing, 28 for reckless driving, 11 for larceny, 11 for being involved in fatal accidents, three for aggravated assault and battery and one for involuntary manslaughter. Other penalties were for failure to stop after accidents and failure to file accident reports.

World Leaders Occupied by War Debt Problem

Europe's war debts to America continue to occupy the statesmen of every nation concerned. To Ramsay MacDonald (upper right) fell the task of preparing a second note by which Great Britain hoped to convince the United States that postponement of the $95,500,000 payment due December 15 is essential to the economic well-being of the world. His advisor was Neville Chamberlain (lower right), chancellor of the exchequer. Premier Herriot of France also prepared a new note for Washington asking postponement of the $20,000,000 payment from France. President Hoover and Secretary Stimson (lower left) held securely to the position that Europe has failed to produce facts which justify postponement of the debt payments. (Associated Press Photos.)

Tipton, Gettysburg, unsuccessful candidate for the state legislature from Adams county, spent $434 in his campaign before the November 8 election, according to his expense account filed in the office of Clayton P. Palmer, clerk of the courts, Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Tipton had no contributions to his campaign and left no unpaid bills.

Expense accounts, showing receipts and expenditures in connection with the election, must be filed on or before December 8. Candidates for offices voted for in the state at large and all political committees working on behalf of such candidates, must file expense accounts with the secretary of the commonwealth. Every other candidate must file in the office of the clerk of the court of quarter sessions of the county where he resides. The treasurer of a committee working on behalf of such a candidate must also file an account in the county where its activities are conducted.

If the amounts received or expended exceed fifty dollars a detailed itemized account with vouchers for all sums in excess of ten dollars must be filed. If the amount received or spent did not exceed fifty dollars an affidavit to that effect must be filed, but if no money was either received or expended, such affidavit is not required.

Al Smith Makes Debut as Singer, With Tremolo Voice--and Knees

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—With knees shaking and voice trembling, Al Smith made his debut Tuesday night as a concert singer.

Before a thousand men and women at a benefit "community sing," the political warrior staked his vocal fame on a husky rendition of his famous campaign song, "The Sidewalks of New York."

The song was an old one to him. He had heard it in dozens of states from California to New England when he was running for president in 1928. But he had never sung a public solo before.

The affair had all the aspects of an opera premiere. Men were there in evening dress, women in jewels and décolleté gowns. The excitement of a "first night" was in the air.

For an hour they waited and sang "Old Black Joe," "Dixie" and things like that.

Then came Smith. He walked onto the stage with the embarrassment of a schoolgirl about to recite a piece.

Spotlights beat down on him. Perspiration rolled off his florid face. He grinned at the orchestra leader. The orchestra leader grinned back. He grinned at the audience and received in return enough applause to satisfy any opera diva.

He made a little speech and

Three Are Fined In Emmitsburg

Three employees of L. R. Waesche and sons, contractors, of Thurmont, were apprehended in Emmitsburg by Corporal Knight, of the state police force, for operating trucks after dark without lights. They pleaded guilty at a hearing before Justice of the Peace J. Henry Stokes, Emmitsburg, and paid fines of $5.75 each.

The men were Nathan L. Valentine, Curtis W. Shuff and Guy W. Wolfe. Wolfe was also charged by Officer Knight with driving on an expired chauffeur's license and paid a fine of $10.75 on the charge. All the men live in Thurmont.

They are truck drivers for the Waesche contractors, who are laying the shoulders on the state road through Emmitsburg from Taneytown to the Pennsylvania line. The men had just quit work and were going through Emmitsburg to the railway depot, where the trucks are kept over-night, when the officer apprehended them.

FORMER COUNTY GIRL KIDNAPPED; FIND NO CLUE

Katharine Thompson, 12, Formerly Of Big- lerville, Disappears Sunday.

FATHER, FORMER CASHIER OF BANK

Residents of Biglerville are anxiously awaiting further developments in the mysterious disappearance of Miss Katharine Thompson, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thompson, of Camp Hill, and former residents of Biglerville. Mr. Thompson was a former cashier of the Biglerville national bank and the Thompson family has a host of friends in this county.

Miss Katharine Thompson mysteriously disappeared Sunday while on her way to Sunday school in Utica, New York, where she has been residing for a year and a half with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan C. Thompson.

Find No Clues

Utica police are of the belief that the girl has been kidnapped by some person or persons of unbalanced mind and that she is found soon some harm may come to her through the hands of her captors.

Sunday morning Miss Thompson and a companion, Miss Mary Johnson, 14, of Mahaffey, Clearfield county, started for Sunday school. When the two girls failed to put in an appearance at noon the uncle and aunt of Miss Thompson and relatives of Miss Johnson, whom she had been visiting, immediately started a search. They made inquiries of church officials and when no trace of their whereabouts could be found, Utica police were notified.

An intensive search of the city and questioning of all those who may have come in contact with the young girls brought no results to the police, who were at a loss to account for the mysterious disappearance.

Mother In State Bureau

The Thompsons resided in Biglerville for some time, later moving to Camp Hill. Mr. Thompson's health failed and he was ordered west by his attending physicians. Mrs. Thompson remained in Camp Hill. Miss Katharine Thompson often visited her uncle and aunt in Utica and on the occasion of her last visit was persuaded to reside there temporarily.

Mrs. Gertrude Thompson, mother of the missing girl, is employed in the statistical and research bureau of the state department of health in Harrisburg. She is of the belief that her daughter has been kidnapped.

Katharine recently wrote to her mother in Camp Hill that she was well and happy.

CIVIL WAR VET BURNS BACK IN MYSTERIOUSWAY

Joseph Riggs Suffers Painful Burns On Back While Sit- ting In Chair.

CONDITION IS REPORTED GOOD

Joseph Riggs, 87-year-old Civil war veteran, today was reported resting as well as could be expected from severe burns on the back and right arm suffered, Monday afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Wills, Baltimore street, where the aged man resides.

Mr. Riggs himself is unable to account for the origin of the fire, but it is believed he was sitting in his room smoking, with his chair backed up to a radiator on which a turkish towel was stretched.

Presumably the aged Civil war veteran was smoking and a spark from his pipe set fire to the towel and then communicated with his clothing.

Back Badly Burned

The man's clothing apparently burned for some time before he discovered the fire. Upon learning that his clothing was afire, Mr. Riggs went out into the hall. Mrs. Wills, the aged man's niece, happened to be passing his room at the time and when Mr. Riggs came out into the hall she extinguished the flames in his clothing with some towels she was carrying.

Mr. Riggs' back was so badly burned that when his clothing was removed some of the skin peeled from his back. The burns extended from his shoulder almost to his waist and down the right arm.

After Mrs. Wills succeeded in extinguishing the flames on Mr. Riggs' clothing, she entered his room and found the towel on fire on the floor. She extinguished this fire before any damage was done.

A physician was summoned and his administrations gave the aged man a certain measure of relief.

Coach Forney Orders Two Drills To Handle Large Squad Of Recruits.

Fifty-one basketball candidates, one of the largest squads ever to report for a Gettysburg high school court team, turned out Tuesday afternoon in response to Coach George Forney's appeal for candidates.

In an effort to give ample attention to the entire squad, Coach Forney has instituted two practice periods, half of the squad drilling from 4 until 5 o'clock and the remaining section from 5 until 6 o'clock. The first cut in the squad will probably be made next week.

Prospects for a good season are not bright in the Maroon and White camp. Four lettermen from the 1931-1932 season were lost by graduation. "Chick" Rupp and "Dick" Smith, forwards; Wilbur King, center, and Weldon Plank, guard, all received their diplomas last year. Their graduation leaves the Maroon mentor with but three letter man, Trostle, Shealer and Kitzmiller.

A better season than last year is practically assured regardless of the quality of the candidates. Last season the Maroon and White dribblers hit rock bottom in the percentage table, turning in but one victory while losing eighteen. Every league game was lost. This year the Maroons are entered in the newly-formed Southern Pennsylvania interscholastic conference and they are hoping to be crowned the first champions of the circuit.

Those reporting for the initial practice were:

Trostle, Utz, M. Guise, Keller, Carter, K. Fisher, Timbers, Sheely, Yingling, Riddimoser, K. Knox, Jones, H. Ridinger, Furney, Anzenberger, Riley, Hudson, Bollinger, Biels, Merskie, Harbaugh, Stahl, Phil, Weller, Socia, Plontz, E. Thomas, Rosenstengel, J. Deardorff, R. White House Cuts
Employees' Pay

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP).—Hard times has descended upon the White House and its employees.

All hands received notice that effective today and continuing to the end of the fiscal year next June, three and one half days' pay a month will have to be cut off. This affected both the president's secretarial staff and the household ushers and servants.

Congress cut $6,180 off the year's White House appropriation last spring. Other economy means were sought by the White House but in the end the payroll had to be imposed to make up the appropriation shortage. The president's pay, fixed by statute, is not affected, but he already has taken a big cut.

State Health Department
Does Varied Work in County

The Pennsylvania state department of health, Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary, reaches into Adams county with a personnel of physicians, nurses, clinics and health officers that brings its activities very close to many of the citizens of the county.

Charged with the duty of defending the public health, the state health department functions in rural communities, small towns and those towns and townships that do not have health boards to carry forward their own health work.

The chief representative of the state department of health in Adams county is Dr. Eugene Elgin, East Berlin, county medical director. To him is delegated the duty of carrying out the regulations that have been promulgated by the advisory health board of the state, and he has supervision of all health activities in the entire county.

Miss Mary E. Grove, R. N., Gettysburg, the visiting nurse of the state health department, is located within the confines of the county. She is in weekly attendance at the child health clinic held every Wednesday, East High street, and the tuberculosis clinic held every Tuesday at the court house.

A full time health officer, working under the direction of Dr. J. Moore Campbell, chief of the bureau of communicable diseases, is in the employ of the state department of health. John Deatrack, Biglerville, has charge of the county. His work covers the entire county, excepting those boroughs that have their own health officers.

Milk control in Adams county, is in charge of H. E. Shroat, Harrisburg, who is milk control officer under the state department of health for district No. 6, in which Adams county is located.

Waterworks and sewerage operations in the county are under the control of R. C. Gorman, district engineer of the bureau of engineering, state department of health, with offices in Harrisburg. This county is in district E.

School medical inspection of all fourth class districts in Adams county is carried forward by the bureau of child health, state department of health, with Dr. J. Bruce McCreary, deputy secretary of health, in charge. The medical inspectors are: Dr. B. C. Jones, Bendersville; Dr. Eugene Elgin, East Berlin; Dr. Ira Henderson, Fairfield; Dr. C. G. Crist, Gettysburg, and Dr. H. S. Crouse, Littlestown.

Vital Statistics
The gathering of vital statistics—births, marriages, deaths—is done for the state department of health in this county by the following persons: Luther S. Rice, Arendtsville; William C. Yeatts, Bendersville; Charles Hafer, Abbottstown; J. H. Seasley, Biglerville; W. W. Reaser, East Berlin; Mrs. S. M. Glenn, Fairfield; Dr. Henry Stewart, Gettysburg; Samuel E. Renner, Littlestown; Dr. George L. Rice, McSherrystown; William R. Snyder, New Oxford, and Harold O. Smith, York Springs.

In addition to all this, work of the pre-school division frequently comes into Adams county, together with inspection by the division of restaurant hygiene, bureau of drug control, general field inspection and other health activities.

It is not unusual for more than 150 specimens to be submitted to the bureau of laboratories of the state department of health, in a single month by physicians from this county, the analysis of which is done in the interest of disease diagnosis and is without cost to the patient.

IMPROPER PASSING

Improper passing is one of the most prolific producers of automobile accidents, the state highway patrol reports. Of 132 drivers cited for hearings recently, sixty-five were accused of this violation. The division of safety will be particularly severe where improper passing is proved.

BULLET STARS ARE HONORED

Stoner And Kozma Given Honorable Mention For All-Eastern By A. P.

Captain William "Bull" Stoner and "Tony" Kozma of the Gettysburg college Orange and Blue Bullets have been given honorable mention on the All-Eastern eleven for 1932, selected by The Associated Press.

Captain Stoner, who hails from Lemasters, was given honorable mention for a guard position and Kozma, product of Berwick high school, was mentioned for an end position.

Stoner and Kozma are the only men mentioned from the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate conference and were given unstinted praise by a number of football critics who cooperated with Associated Press sports writers in selecting the All-Eastern eleven.

Captain Stoner played his last football game for G-burg, graduating next June. Kozma is a sophomore and is expected to be a valuable asset to the Bullets in the next two years.

Pittsburgh, Cornell, Pennsylvania and Army each placed two men on the All-Eastern, and Fordham, Colgate and Columbia each placed one.

This is the first time Gettysburg college players have been so honored since Paul Tussey was given honorable mention in '29, Eddie Gulian and Earl McMillen in '28 and Charley Spangler given honorable mention for the All-American by Grantland Rice in '26.

HALF MILLION IN BONDS STOLEN

Five $100,000 Bonds Taken From Shelf in Bank Cashier's Cage.

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Half a million dollars in Liberty bonds were stolen Tuesday from a paying teller's cage in the Continental bank, in the heart of New York's financial district.

The teller, Robert Drummond, said the bonds, five of $100,000 each, disappeared from a shelf in his cage between 12:30 and 2 p. m.

The loss was covered by insurance.

Teller Exonerated
After bank officials absolved Drummond of any suspicion of any sort, detectives advanced the belief the bonds were flinched from the cage possibly by a cane with gum on the end.

Examination of the ledge of the shelf disclosed traces of a sticky substance.

Drummond said he had left his cage several times in the interval between arrival of the bonds and their disappearance.

Two Men Suspected
During this time, Drummond said two men came to his cage, asking the procedure of cashing a check drawn upon a California bank. Other tellers also recalled the visit of the two men and they were taken, along with Drummond, to police headquarters to search through photographs in the rogues' gallery.

Police said the theft doubtless was committed by some one who knew of the transfer of the bonds to the Continental bank from the C. F. Childs company, of 1 Wall street.

tercede when it determined the violations were clear cut and flagrant. "In one case we had another A.A.A. club defend one of our members in police court near Washington, D. C. In this instance the case was won for him and he was saved $101.45 through the fact that his membership in the Gettysburg club entitled him to free legal service in every one of the 1000 affiliated A.A.A. clubs."

The report further explained the progress of the county wide safety program the motor club is sponsoring and told of the organization of school boy safety patrols in Littlestown, Fairfield and East Berlin and stated these patrols would be organized in all schools of the county.

The value of affiliation with the P. M. F. and the A.A.A., the state and national bodies, was fully described in the report and successful efforts in tax reduction on automobiles and the sponsorship of the personal safety responsibility by the P. M. F. was explained.

Raymond Stock, of Abbottstown, was awarded a prize of $5 from the Lancaster Automobile club, of which

SPANISH DEPUTY SUES FOR COLLEAGUE'S ACRES

Madrid (AP).—Deputy Lamamie de Clairac offered in parliament to give his lands to any deputy who thought "he could make them pay under conditions created by the present government."

Perez Madrigal took him up and now has sued in Madrid district court for fulfillment of the verbal contract, citing Julian Besteiro, president of congress, as "presiding witness" to the transaction.

Judicial investigators say there may be something in Madrigal's case.

GOLFER PLAYS BALL FROM SPECTATOR'S POCKET

Sydney (AP).—A mixture of billiards and golf is reported from one of the local golf courses.

E. W. Carr, former international runner and now a crack golfer, was playing in a tournament when he gave a golf ball a ride from the tee only to find it had landed in the pocket of a competitor standing on the course 200 yards away.

The ball was dropped on the spot over which it had landed and Carr went on to win his match.

RAILROAD BOX CARS SOLD FOR USE AS CORN CRIBS

Stater, Mo. (AP).—Nearly 1,000 old box cars, no longer suitable as rolling stock, are being sold by a railroad to farmers for use as corn cribs, machine sheds and other small farm buildings.

The cars, sold for $10 each, are in good condition despite 12 years' service on the road. They make "buildings" 40 feet long, eight feet wide and nine feet high. They will hold 900 bushels of corn.

"Al" Smith
With a final roar the song was ended.

Applause Thunderous

The applause was thunderous. The audience then did a verse and Smith started from the stage. But he got no farther than the wings.

"Wait and I'll see if the professionals know the air of one of New York's sidewalks," he said with a wink.

He and the orchestra leader, arms around each other's shoulders, held a conference. Then the fiddles started and Smith, beginning to like this singing business, gave them a verse of "The Bowery."

He had the gestures of an opera star and a college cheer leader combined. When the orchestra got ahead of him he stopped and told them, "Back up." His knees did a "jack-in-the-box" act after every line.

Lets Voice Out Full Blast

When the audience joined in the chorus he let his voice out full blast, and then, without making the customary stage bows, he fled back into the wings. His stunt for a hospital fund drive was over.

A few minutes later a woman with a lorgnette asked her companion in the lobby:

"What do you think of Mr. Smith as a singer?"

"I think he's a swell public speaker," came the reply, as Smith himself streaked away with a police escort.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

A birthday dinner was served Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hampton, York street, in honor of their daughter, Lela Davis, and granddaughters, Esther and Helen Davis.

A Path To Paradise

By Coningsby Dawson

SYNOPSIS: Unexpectedly Dicky, Santa's former husband, tells her the truth about her insatiable desire to live with those around her, and particularly of Clive, her second husband. Next morning, after Clive has left her for work, Santa persuades herself that Dicky is wrong, and although she knows that Clive would disapprove of her, Dicky, it is not his voice that answers.

Chapter 39

A DIP INTO TRUTH

"How are you, since you know me?" asked Santa.

"Does that matter?"

"Not particularly. What's Mr. Dak doing?"

"Busy."

"Call him."

"The fluting refinement of the voice at the other end faded."

"Dearie, you're no longer his wife. You know how irritable it makes him to be disturbed."

"You bet!" Santa slipped into the vernacular. "Tell him to ring me. He has my number."

She fussed about the apartment, not daring to go out or to make any engagement. She was struck to concert-pitch feverish to get the scene over. As she was sitting down to lunch, the telephone tinkled. She snatched the receiver only to hear Clive enquiring about her headache.

At two it rang again.

"Yes, I phoned you." Her anger was evident.

"See you presently."

"But when? I've wasted my morning—"

He had broken the connection.

There was nothing gained by having a witness to this crowning folly. Going to the kitchen, she dismissed the maid for the afternoon and retired to prepare for the ordeal.

She was in the midst of dressing when the door-bell summoned her. Draping herself in a negligee, she answered. There stood Dicky, groomed and smiling. Producing a box, he thrust it at her.

"Roses as a peace-offering."

Ignoring the gift she said, "If you'll amuse yourself in the drawing-room, I'll be with you directly."

Safe in her bedroom, she dawdled. She oughtn't to have taken this risky step without Clive. It was the old story of doing things alone, being too sure of herself and then regretting.

The door opened.

"We've talked before in a bedroom. It's no novelty."

"I suppose it isn't," she spoke coolly. "I still have to brush my hair." She proceeded to do it.

He seated himself in the chair that Clive usually occupied.

"What was the rush?"

"This is our last meeting, Dicky."

"O, yes?"

"Before we part, I owe it to myself to put you right on some of the mud you flung at me last night. Perhaps I wasn't a good wife to you, but I am to Clive. Not as good as he deserves; so I intend to be better."

"You were a good wife to me, Santa."

She glanced sharply across her shoulder; then went back to her brushing. In the mirror she stared into his reflected eyes. For the moment at least he had ceased to be trivial.

"If you can own that now, why did you lie to me last night?"

"Seeing you happy without me."

"Made you long to make me unhappy—it that it? You succeeded. But why did you first pretend to be generous? To have come to Clive's rescue, had that really been your motive, would have been magnificent. I see now that it's not in your nature to be magnificent."

"You don't give me credit for much—you never did, Santa. I tried to help Clive that I might square accounts with you. You divorced me without claiming alimony?"

She caught her breath in a nervous laugh.

"A fat lot of good it would have done to claim alimony. The chief reason for our divorce was that you'd been content to live on me."

"Not content," he corrected. "I hated living on you. I expected to be rich when my father died. It didn't seem to me unfair to let you paddle the canoe—but why go into that? You pushed me too hard. Bought out all my worst qualities."

"You jacked me a few weeks too soon for your own profit—and, I may add, for my own self-respect. I'm wealthy now. I'd like to feel that I'd been assessed for the damage I'd done you. It's impossible to approach you with an offer of a cash settlement. Because of that, when I learned that Clive was in low water—"

She swung around.

"You saw your chance to compromise me. To lead Clive to suspect—"

"I saw my chance, mistakenly as events have turned out, to prove to you that I could be decent."

"Dicky."

"Yes."

"Some of the things you said last night were true; that was why they hurt. You accused me of being most selfish. If I'm as directionless as selfish when I feel myself that I'm that, I'm a ship without a rudder."

He nodded.

that, I'm a ship without a rudder. You've made me feel insecure."

"That's what divorce does to you. I have no confidence left in my judgment. I went wrong in the greatest decision."

"Me, too," she tapped her breast.

"To have been divorced is to have suffered an amputation. The shock stays. If you were to marry again, Dicky, would having been married to me make a difference? What I mean is could you force yourself to act as though it were the first time?"

He smiled.

"Your question tells a lot. No, I couldn't. I'd be continually confusing the second woman with you. I'd start to refer to doings in the past and then remember that it was with you I'd done them."

She seated herself at last, drawing her chair close to his.

"That's what I've feared might happen between myself and Clive."

"Has happened?" he suggested.

"Has happened." She responded to his sympathy. "You're the only person in the world to whom I would own it—I suppose because you're the only person who would understand me. You come suddenly into my mind by day, for no reason whatsoever; you become so vivid that sometimes you usurp the place of Clive. Worse still, I dream about you at night; that I'm still married to you."

"Same with me, Santa."

"But isn't it queer," she appealed to him, "after the cat-and-dog life we've led? I was always prodding you to set you in motion. When I wasn't, I was checking you. If I hadn't goodness knows where we'd have landed—I'm sorry. I oughtn't to have said that."

"I was a crazy ass." He grinned ruefully. "Apologies aren't necessary. But why feed the same medicine to a steady earnest fellow like Clive?"

With a stifled cry of gratitude she dived forward.

"You do approve of him?"

"He's the salt of the earth, Santa. If you mess him up, you don't deserve to be forgiven."

Her eyes filled.

"Then I don't deserve to be forgiven. I'm so afraid after a quarrel. All our rows are the results of my acting policeman. Except when I hold him in my arms, I'm nervous."

"Then stop acting policeman. I wish there was something I could do."

She stroked his sleeve to soften the blow.

"You're sweet—but having you hanging around makes matters difficult."

"Poor darling!"

"When the clock striking five in the passage warned them, they seemed to have been talking for hours."

"What time does Clive return?"

Dicky rose, casting a furtive glance round the bedroom. At the front-door he halted.

"I made a bad husband; I could be a good friend if you would allow me."

"Already you've done me good." She clasped his hand.

Five minutes later Clive entered. "Headache better?"

"It's eased up a trifle."

"Well, you're going to bed, if I have to carry you."

When he had helped her to undress and had placed hot-water bottles around her, she asked a naive question:

"Do you ever fancy that I deceive you?"

"That proves you're sick," he burst out laughing.

"I only asked," she settled back luxuriously, "because—Well, this apartment—always wanting to do things my own way. It isn't loyal."

"Simple Simon!" He stooped his lips to her bare shoulder.

Santa and Clive are happy, tomorrow, but they are skating over danger on very thin ice.

Says Secretary To Vare Peddled State Scholarships

Philadelphia, Nov. 30 (AP).—The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin says a former secretary of William Vare, leader of the city G. O. P., is alleged to have used the latter of face as a clearing house in the sale of free scholarships.

Each state senator has three free scholarships every two years for distribution to poor and worthy students in each of the four state-aided universities, Pennsylvania, Temple, Penn State and Pittsburgh.

These scholarships, the Bulletin says, are alleged to have been peddled about to the highest bidders. The state senators often wishing to exchange scholarships would swap them around it is alleged and in this way lost track of them, the scholarship falling into the hands of the racketeers would then be sold for $500 or more although they called for four years' tuition at a total value of $1,200 to $1,600.

THE VERY PLEASANT MAN

He thought by pleasing people he could walk an easy way.
And so a word which might offend
he never dared to say
And when there rose an argument of any consequenceInstead of taking sides he chose to sit upon the fence.When asked for his opinion since in peace he wished to live
He always answered with a smirk that he had none to give.While other men became embroiled in fights o'er right and wrong He kept a grin upon his face for all who came alongBut life is not so simple. Even lap dogs sometimes growl.
Though smiles are often welcomed there are times a man should scowl.Though courtesy's a virtue and 'tis good to be polite There's many a grim occasion when a man should start a fight.He hoped to keep from trouble, but he found to his dismay Life daily gave him burdens which he couldn't smile awayAnd seeking all men's friendship he discovered at the end Most folks prefer an honest foe to such a doubtful friend.HENRY FORD'S CONDITION

these New York visits is something of a puzzle. Most of them are kept pearing as guests of honor at the

Balloon Parade

Again Thanksgiving day brings

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LONG AFTERWARDS

HOW often have I spoken of that delightful little masterpiece "The Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft," by George Gissing. I read from it again and again, as though a friend called in for a brief talk.The life of this writer was one long struggle against poverty, discouragement and domestic unhappiness—yet he marshalled his forces in a manner to produce nearly 20 complete books before he died at the age of 46! H. G. Wells was one of his closest friends, and I have in my possession a letter written by Wells to Edmond Gosse telling of his last visit with Gissing at his death bed. To the last his thoughts were upon his last uncompleted novel and upon those whom he loved best.Gissing was a lover of books, especially of the classics. Many a time he spent his last few shillings for a book! And often he parted with one of these beloved volumes for the same amount in order that he might purchase the simplest food for sustenance. In a bookman's catalog I came across one of these the other day that had been owned and fingered by Gissing. It originally cost but a few shillings. But the bookseller had it catalogued for $30.00! Why? Merely because Gissing once owned it. Why wasn't it worth that amount while he lived?Long afterward appraisal always comes! Worth is something that is forgotten, it seems, in this day of speed, money and ambition. Poe borrowed a few dollars from his publishers that he might have the barest necessities. Today those books of his that the public spurned sell for their weight in gold!We pay tribute to big things that dazzle the eye, but human greatness of character passes us by—until long afterward. Long after those who so much merited appreciation and tribute have retired forever from the stage.The silent spirit of George Gissing lives within this room in which I now write. I understand the pangs that were his, and that treasured story of his own reflections, aspirations and failures heartens me. Can anyone say that he is dead?Life is no mean opportunity! It is an inherited privilege to serve—to enlarge a personality and to worthily strive.

My Beauty Hint

By Ruby Keeler

From my viewpoint the words
"Pat gently into the skin" are all wrong. I like a "rub the skin" slogan better, and that is my one beauty hint.Rubbing the skin, I find, is not harmful, providing the rubbing is of the constructive "upward and outward" type rather than the downward and inward motion. Patting, on the other hand, allows the skin to become too dead and flabby.The advantages of rubbing, I have found, are three-fold: You roll out dirt, peel off dry skin, and revive dying pores.

Lovely tapering hands can be appreciated only when they are handled gracefully.Often a hand that lacks physical perfection gives a better impression than a hand of lovelier contours simply because the owner has learned the art of hand postures.
There can be no beauty in hands that are carelessly managed or that are forever in action.Hands that are quietly relaxed give a more pleasing effect than hands in movement. Fluttering hands may attract the attention, but the notice will be one of distraction rather than admiration.

It is much easier to keep a daily check on one's measurements and weight and to rectify any creeping up inches or pounds than to ignore one's body until the added flesh takes possession.A few minutes of rolling on the floor will take the inches off the hips and thighs and a few motions of the arms will melt away the flesh on the upper part of the body—that is if the weight has not gained too much ground.Rather than follow a strenuous diet to reduce after the weight has been added, it is better to remember the old rule about the ounce of prevention.

Few persons, I believe, know how to get the greatest value from bath salts in a tepid bath. Since they will not dissolve well unless the water is hot—too hot for the body —place the amount desired in a cup of hot water, dissolve, and then pour into the bath.Much the same method gives me pleasure when applied to soap instead of bath salts.I often come home tired after a long day at work, dissolve a whole bar of soap in hot water, and then revel in the luxury of a whole tub-ful of frothy suds.Fish Also Feel Weather ChangesSudden changes of water temperatures are highly injurious to fish life native to Pennsylvania streams and lakes, Fish Commissioner Oliver M.
Deibler said today.If the change in temperature be brought about gradually, however, most species of fish can withstand a wide temperature range. For instance, yellow perch during the summer months are at home in water temperatures of 80 degrees Fahrenheit and during the winter are equally at home in temperature as low as 30 degrees.Cold blooded animals, of which fish are a species, it is generally ac-knowledgeed, carry a body temperature very nearly equal to that of the medium in which they live. This is not a characteristic of warm-blooded animal life. Therefore, when fish are subjected to a sudden change in water temperature, a severe shock is placed on their body activities, often resulting in death.Rebuild Outpost At which disclosed stumps of upright logs still existing a foot or two beneath the surface. Crude hard-relics also were uncovered.Seventy-eight British soldiers were killed in 70 minutes at the fort in 1763 when the Chippewas staged a surprise attack by inviting the soldiers out to watch a game of

Sends Seeds To Soviet Foresters

Native Pennsylvania trees will soon be growing in Soviet Russia. Professor George S. Perry, of the Pennsylvania research institute at Mont Alto, recently sent a large shipment of tree seeds to the All Union Institute of Forest Culture at Moscow.

Included in the shipment are acorns of rock, scarlet, black and white oaks, chestnuts, wild black cherry seeds, and nuts of the pig-nut and bitternut hickories. A later shipment will contain seeds of hemlock, shortleaf pine, scrub pine, tulip tree, sycamore, beech, and red-bud.

In return the Institute of Forest Culture has shipped to the Pennsylvania forest research institute a consignment of seed of the Siberian larch, Dahurian larch, Russian birch and Nordmann fir.

The research foresters plan to sow these seeds in the Mont Alto state forest tree nursery. The seedlings and transplants raised from them will then be planted in the state forests to determine their suitability for timber production in Pennsylvania.

No Fees Needed For Protest Petitions

"No money is needed for filing any petition complaining of rates or service of utilities with the public service commission. Any petition signed by any citizen or group of citizens sent to the commission will receive proper consideration."

This statement was made by the public service commission to warn communities and individuals against contributing to a racket recently brought to its notice. It has to do with a new method of securing signatures to petitions for presentation to the commission. Under this plan prospective signers first must produce fifty cents before they are allowed to sign. In addition they must agree to contribute an additional $1.50 to the circulator of the petition in the event of the commission acting favorably.

"The public service commission believes that rackets of this character may be going on in many communities where there may be dissatisfaction with public utility rates," the commission's statement said. Citizens are warned in the statement against allowing themselves to be duped and "petitions circulated under such conditions should be ignored."

"The commission welcomes definite information, properly supported, of any case where money is being solicited for signatures to petitions allegedly destined for its consideration."

Move Stolen Safe In Stolen Automobile

Ridgely, Md.—Thieves entered the office of T. Noble Jarrell, canner of Gildsboro, Maryland, early Friday and removed his safe, carrying it in an automobile to a nearby woods. On entering the woods, the automobile became mired and the robbers then returned to Gildsboro, broke into the garage of County Commissioner J. Frank Lane and a used car bearing a dealer's license, No. 3651, was taken. Returning to the mired car, the safe was transferred, and the robbers drove about two miles into a dense woods, where the safe was broken open and the contents of money and jewelry valued at $400 was removed. Valuable papers in the safe were left undisturbed.

The abandoned car left mired in the woods has been identified as having been stolen from Dr. W. E. Lennon, Federalsburg, Maryland.

Hindenburg Falls, Cusses, Then Laughs

Berlin (AP).—Unfamiliarity with his temporary abode in the chancellors' palace caused venerable President Von Hindenburg to take a fall which recently stirred up discussion and gossip at the German capital, and caused countless inquiries into the health of "der alte herr" (the old gentleman).

Exaggerated accounts of a serious injury were not borne out when it was learned later that, except for a blue mark on his shin, the fall left no trace and resulted in no interruption of the 85-year-old president's daily work.

A liaison officer who sees the president almost every day narrated the story as follows:

"At the chancellors' palace, the parquet floor is one step higher than the rather broad space under the windows. The president was walking through one of the large rooms in the dusk, when he decided to step to the window. He did not remember the step down, hence slipped."

"For a moment the old gentleman ripped out a few picturesque expressions from his military days, then he bethought himself of the humor of the situation and laughed heartily."

Enters Professional Golf Ranks In Teens

Cincinnati, Ohio (AP).—Norman "Bud" Dickman has realized the ambition of many of caddy to "lord it over" some of the duffers for whom he has hunted balls in the rough.

Dickman is a professional at the age of 18, in fact has had that ranking for three years, and possibly is the country's youngest golf "pro." "Bud" is the Homestead country club "pro" and holds the course record over that nine-hole layout. Respect is accorded anyone who shoots the Homestead course, par 72, in 66, and that is what Dickman does quite often.

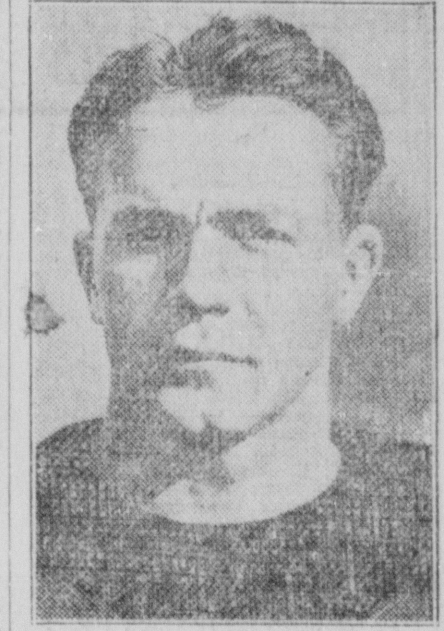

Dickman began caddying when he was only 13. He matches his golfing

Portsmouth Ace Sets Brilliant Athletic Record

Portsmouth, O. (AP).—Earl (Dutch) Clark, one of the leading point scorers in the National Professional Football league, had a brilliant athletic career before he joined the Portsmouth Spartans.

Coch A. A. Staggs termed Clark in his prep days, "the greatest natural high school athlete he had ever seen."

Clark almost decided to enter Northwestern university upon his graduation from a Pueblo, Colorado, high school, but suddenly returned home and matriculated at Colorado college. There was a girl in the case, now Mrs. Clark.

At Colorado college Clark shone so brilliantly he won a berth on the Associated Press all-America team of 1928.

First Night Grid Tilt Complicated By Fickle Lights

Columbus, O. (AP)—Doctors, lawyers and merchants in Columbus remember the first night football game played in this section of the country 30 years ago.

Many of them were on the opposing Otterbein and Ohio Medical teams.

A white ball was used, and sometimes it sailed above the reach of the arc lights, only to reappear again, often disastrously to the defending team.

Several times the lights went out, and the teams completed the play as best they could in the darkness.

But there was no forward pass the night to complicate matters. A team had three downs in which to make five yards. The game lasted 35 minutes.

"Badman" Peps 'Bama Forward Wall

Tuscaloosa, Ala. (AP) — Newt Godfree makes a difference in the line at Alabama.

His crashing, smashing, aggressive play gives confidence and inspiration to other members of the forward wall, and he has been the big cog in the 'Bama line in all important games this season.

The "Badman," as the big sack is known to his team mates, was on the bench most of last season with injuries, and was threatened with a bad knee this fall. But he refused to let these things keep him down, and several up-and-coming tackles who coveted his place were disappointed.

The "Badman" is "bad" only on the football field.

Fannie Brenizer, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Pentz, Miss Savilla Dick and Howard Sanders. The evening was spent in playing games. Music was furnished by Mr. Pentz and Mr. Sanders. Refreshments were served during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall received a number of gifts in silver.

BIG GAME FISH SEASON ENDS

Opening Of Deer Season
Marks Close Of Fishing Season; Record Catches Made.

The climax to the Pennsylvania hunting season for 1932, official opening of the deer season, marks "finis" for the fisherman in waters of the commonwealth. Midnight on Wednesday, November 30, brings the curtain down on the open season this year for large and small mouth black bass, wall-eyed pike, pickerel, muskies, Western and Northern pike. Streams and lakes in many sections of the state yielded record catches during summer and autumn months.

A survey of the season, based on reports available at the fish commission, reveals that bass-fishing this year was generally above the standards of previous seasons. Oliver M. Deibler, fish commissioner, said. From the angle of the "big game" fishermen, two record muskellunge, "tigers of the fresh water," were brought to gaff. One of the big fish, weighing forty-six pounds, ten ounces, was taken from Edinboro lake, Erie county. The other, tipping the scales at forty-six pounds, was lured from the waters of Conneaut lake, Crawford county.

Good catches of black bass were reported from all sections of the state.

Lakes and ponds in Wayne, Susquehanna and other northwestern counties provided excellent fishing for pickerel and yellow perch. Heavy stocking by the fish commission with bluegill sunfish was rewarded during the past season with catches of these popular pen fish.

While the season for all species of bass, wall-eyed pike, pickerel and muskellunge closes on November 30, river clubs or fall fish, suckers, catfish, yellow perch, sunfish and eels may be legally taken on a 1932 fishing license until midnight, December 31.

Ex-deputy Arrested In Store Robberies

York, Pa.—York police Saturday brought about the arrest of a second former deputy sheriff who has been identified, police said, as a member of a gang which burglarized a number of local stores recently.

The accused is Charles J. Olinger, former deputy sheriff and former member of the local police department.

Alleged Leader of Gang Held
Former Deputy Sheriff Roland Miller was arrested Friday as the alleged leader of the gang.

Gilbert Rebert, of Texas, Maryland, who, it is alleged, served time in Maryland prisons for liquor-law violations, was arrested with Olinger Saturday. All of the trio have been identified, according to police.

Daniel Rizzio also is under technical arrest, but he has not been positively identified as an accomplice.

Kephart May Seek Governor's Chair

Erie, Pa. (AP)—Justice John W. Kephart, of the state supreme court, may be a candidate for governor in 1934.

The jurist said Friday he may become a candidate because he is "vitaly interested in decreasing city, county and state expenditures." He pointed out, however, it was too early to declare his candidacy definitely.

He discredited reports that Governor Pinchot might have influenced the trend away from the republican party in Allegheny county in Tuesday's election. "The governor was not even a factor," he said. "The voters were dissatisfied with things as they are and wanted a change."

Justice Kephart delivered an Armistice Day talk at Girard Friday.

In the first four games this season Purdue's backs, all together, averaged 4.28 yards per try on running plays from scrimmage. The team had completed 12 out of 29 forward passes for a total aerial gain of 255 yards, an average of 8.8 yards per attempt.

West Point Goal Of Robert Gibb, Wesleyan's Hero

Lincoln, Neb. (AP)—If the United States Military academy has a pair of shoes to fit a good student, a soldierly, industrious young man, an all-around athlete, Robert Gibb wants to try them on.

Especially if there are a pair of football-cleated shoes suitable for a lad 6 feet 1 1/2 inches tall and weighing 195 does Bob hope to qualify, for it was by running 107 yards for a Nebraska Wesleyan touchdown against Oklahoma City university that he popped into the headlines in a big way.

His near-record dash, however, was by no means his first athletic feat. He has already won eight athletic letters at Wesleyan and by the end of the current school year should have acquired three more. He has, despite his heavy build, done 100 yards in 9.7 seconds.

Gibb, son of a Methodist minister at Wauneta, Nebraska, has earned most of his college expenses, running the gamut from dish-washing to radio singing.

DATE DROP LARGER

Indio, Cal. (AP) — California's date crop this season is estimated at approximately 5,000,000 pounds compared with 2,252,000 last year. The United States normally imports about 45,000,000 pounds of dates yearly. Hence the domestic production this season will be about 15 per cent of the total consumed, the Date Growers' association estimates.

Fine Dealers Who Sell Stale Meat

Adding sulphite powders to stale ground meat caused the prosecution of thirty-four meat retailers in central Pennsylvania during the past month, according to a report from the bureau of foods and chemistry, Pennsylvania department of agriculture.

Termining the practice a "pernicious form of fraud," the state pure food agents rounded up all offending dealers and ordered prosecutions which carry a minimum fine of $100 and costs.

It is explained that the sulphite powders commonly used in this fraud contain the preservative sulphur dioxide which, in addition to preserving, imparts a fresh, red color to the meat. It is only by chemical means that the preservatives can be detected. Both hamburger steak and sausage were found doctored with the chemical.

The law which specifically prohibits the use of sulphite powders in meat was adopted in Pennsylvania twenty-seven years ago. The recent round-up of violators in central Pennsylvania is one of the most outstanding in a decade, officials state.
